Wyoming.com Defines Service-Impacting Event of October 31, 2014

Riverton, WY (October 31, 2014) – The Wyoming-based Internet Service Provider announced that it experienced an event yesterday that impacted Internet customers in the Sublette County area. Specifically, equipment issues prevented communications from passing at a microwave tower location. There was no other outage or failure within the Wyoming.com network as this was an isolated incident.

“This event impacted some business and residential customers in Pinedale and Big Piney yesterday”, stated Chris Robisch, Director of Sales and Marketing. The event began at 4:08p.m. and was resolved by 5:33p.m. “Our Engineering team identified the interruption to service-providing equipment and quickly dispatched Field Technicians to the location. After a thorough examination of the equipment, the issue was found that prevented communications traffic to and from the affected tower. The equipment was repaired and tested successfully so that communications could resume”, Robisch explained.

“We were not happy with the impact caused to our customers in Sublette County”, added Mitch Benson, President, “However, I am extremely proud of how quickly and efficiently our Engineering and Field Service teams addressed the issue and restored services to those customers impacted”.

“This is why we have a twenty-four hour Network Operations Center”, Robisch added, “so that we can bring our customers back online quickly”.

Wyoming.com customers should experience no additional issues with their Internet and MPLS services related to this incident.
